MASTER OF WELLINGTON COLLEGE

18 July 1941

MAJOR H. W. HOUSE APPOINTED

The Governors of Wellington College have unanimously elected Major H. W. House, D.S.O., M.C., as Master of Wellington in place of the late Mr. Longden.

A correspondent writes:—

Mr. House is at present a Major in the Army, having joined up at the beginning of the war. He is now Military Assistant to the Quarter-Master-General at the War Office. He is a Fellow and Lecturer at Queen's College, Oxford, and Laming Resident Fellow.

He has a remarkable record. In 1914 he gained a scholarship at Queen's College from Rugby. Instead of taking this he joined up, and after being wounded was awarded the D.S.O. and M.C., and as a temporary colonel at 21 he commanded his regiment in action. After the War he studied at the University of Paris, and has served in the Colonial Office. He is a good organizer and has the knack of making friends with every class. He is popular with undergraduates and is married. He is a man of high ideals and a strong religious sense.

With his fine military record, acquaintance with the greater world, ability to influence young people, powers of organization, and close contact with the universities, the greater educational authorities, and the War Office, he should be an ideal Master for Wellington, where Service values still prevail. He seems well fitted when the war is over to carry Wellington from the old way of life towards new and untried conditions which public schools will have to face.

PREFACE.

THE present edition of the "Wellington College Register" is the fifth; in the last edition, published ten years ago, it was stated in the Preface that no further book would contain the names of all Wellingtonians, but for various reasons it has seemed best to the Committee of the Old Wellingtonian Society once more to issue a complete list.

For one thing, no Roll of Service was published after the Great War, and the details which would have been included in such a record will be found in the present volume. For another, after much consideration, it was decided to return to the system of showing names by terms and not alphabetically, so that in the future the earlier years might be cut off and issued separately; in this case it would seem best to publish as a preliminary a complete list by terms, with a full alphabetical index added. By economising space it has been found possible to add nearly two thousand names and much information without increasing the bulk of the book to any great extent.

There will, no doubt, be criticism of the form of the book, but we trust that those who buy it will agree that however simple an alphabetical list is to use, there is an added interest in a Register which gives the careers of contemporaries close together.

To enumerate all others to whom our thanks are due for their help is not possible, but F. G. Lawrence, the Editor,; G. V. Bromley Way, who compiled a Roll of Service; and A. G. M. Hesilrige, who has given all possible assistance with the printing, are those to whom we certainly owe most.

In the course of collecting material an effort was made to reach all Wellingtonians with a circular asking for particulars, and we are grateful to those who filled up the form and ordered the book.

As it is impossible for the Editor, however carefully he gleans information from letters and newspapers, to keep up with the careers and movements of any but a small number, we have no doubt that there are many errors and omissions in the present volume.

It will be of the greatest help in the future if those who can add information—particularly permanent addresses—to their own records or those of other O.W.'s, will write to the Honorary Secretary of the Old Wellingtonian Society, so that any succeeding edition of this book may be more complete.
